Only light government casualties have been reported thus far, and most units are still holding their ground. The next Mekong River convoy is scheduled to leave for Phnom Penh on 28 May, but its departure may be postponed if the fighting continues near Neak Luong.

Communists Planning Ambush

The Communists reportedly are preparing to harass government resupply convoys that may be sent over the hazardous highways to the capital of Phuoc Long Province, some 75 miles northeast of Saigon. The last convoy was in March, and another is scheduled for June.

Fresh Communist troops allegedly have moved into Binh Duong Province from Cambodia and are positioning themselves along the access roads to Phuoc Long Province to prepare for a "large-scale ambush." There have been some reports of troops being sighted along the major roads from Saigon, but aside from normal rotation of forces in this area, no new units are known to have entered from Cambodia.
